Middle School (6-8) Math Teacher

Falk School, a coeducational K-8 laboratory school in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania seeks a full-time, experienced, dynamic Teacher of Mathematics, for the next academic year, beginning August 2017.

Salary range is competitive and commensurate with experience. Falk School, which is a department in the School of Education at the University of Pittsburgh, offers excellent benefits.

Candidates should have successful teaching experience in middle or high school mathematics classrooms and experience in mathematics curriculum design and/or implementation. The educator filling these roles will be responsible for continuing to develop a program that features progressive ideas about mathematics instruction. The position also involves working in close collaboration with colleagues to develop and reflect on the K-8 mathematics program. The successful candidate will have a strong vision for dynamic approaches to mathematics education, strong collaborative skills, and a willingness to support educational research. Strong skills in oral and written communication will be required to frame and present the complex world of mathematics pedagogy to a variety of audiences.

Middle or high school teaching experience with a Master’s Degree or equivalent coursework are required. Broad experience is advantageous, as collaboration across disciplines and grade levels is valued at our school. Highly creative work experience in the field of mathematics is an asset.
